

We're it up, everybody,

welcome to word of the day with comedians,
I'm your host, Dennis Dennis Matter.

And today my guest is comedian and sex worker rights advocates Caitlin Bailey.

Thank you so much for having me.
I'm thrilled to be here. Thanks.

All right, Caitlin.

So our word of the day
today will be intemperate. Intemperate means to have extreme conditions or having or showing a lack of emotional calmness or control.

Oh, cool. So borderline being.

Basically me in my everyday. Life. Brit having. Total. Lack of a metro columnist in control,

which can define every relationship
I've ever had. Sure.

Yeah, being yeah,
people under pressure are intemperate,

as they say or people.

Yeah, people under 30
are intemperate or people with small children and not enough sleep are often intemperate.

They're all right.

We did it. When is an incident where you where you have felt intemperate?

Oh, God. I get intemperate at the machine.

That's my that's my big problem.
I usually hold it together, right?

Like when I'm talking to other people,

I try to be like kind to my partner,
which is the thing that I'm working on.

But if the computer fucks up,
I'm ready to throw it out

the goddamn window
in like point nine seconds.

It's like, Yeah,
absolutely not. I a thing.

And this is 100% my fault

because the machine,
but I click on people, send me voice memos

and I click on them and I can't see where on the machine it's playing.

So I like to have to shut down the whole,
the whole thing.

And I'm just screaming at like voice memos that are playing

like during Zoom calls and people,
you know, I'm off it.

You know, like, sometimes this will happen
like during a meeting

or whatever, and it's like,
I can't make the voices go away.

And it's like, I'm being intemperate.

But very during a zoom
calls when I lose my shit and I'm on mute.

And then Zoom was like,

Hey, it looks like you talking,
do you want to unmute yourself?

Like, No, I don't zoom.
I do not want to, you.

Know, I'm having a coughing fit. Yeah, no.

I don't want people to hear my snort laughter. Yeah.

Oh, I didn't know you were a snowboarder.

Oh, now all my agenda.

To get. You the smart.

Article that's going to be so much worse than it is normally.

Oh, the snort will come with phlegm and projectiles today. That's oh no. Do you realize the video is going to get slimy?

Did you know, according to Merriam-Webster,

did you know, intemperate means?

Not well-tempered? Yes, because we just defined it, Miriam.

We just talked about that. Yeah, I love that.

Merriam-Webster, for these words, will occasionally have a, did you know, fact about the words.

And I like how this fact the did you know, fact for this word is just another definition. The definition of good.

It's great. But did you know.

When did this come about? Is this a reply?

Does this precede bitch

in the like, you know, the parlance or whatever?

Or does this come out? Is this polite?

You know, bitches be crazy.

Like where? Where in the lexicon?

Where in the English language does intemperate come from?

Do you quote Homer bitches be intemperate.

Bitches the temperate?

The word comes from Latin intemperance, a combination of N and the verb temperature meaning to temper or to mix.

So the epidemiology of that word is from Latin, which, you know, a lot of our words come from Latin. Sure.

I mean, I will also say that one solution to being in temperate is a nice mixed cocktail that will help return you to whatever equilibrium.

So let's let's start working on our sentence of the day.

So let's use that.

So let's you. Let's define the word
by using it in its opposite context.

Because why not make more people confused
by the context of debris? Sure.

Totally intemperate.

Let's put it equal here.

Equal or not, equal will do not equal to alcohol.

You're doing word math. Yeah.

Look at. You. Hall is yet diagram
the fuck out of that sentence.

It's just work in temp intemperate people.

Oh man, I have to worry about being on camera talking,

and now I have to worry about my typing skills.

What did I get myself into?

OK, so we'll use that.

Intemperate does not equal alcohol.

Alcohol is the solution
for intemperate people.

Yes, there you go.

So that's where we'll get our sentence on that.

We need a subject for this sentence.

So what is the name of a person who would be generally considered intemperate?

Obviously, I think the opposite is Karen.

Steve, OK, Steve is a good.

Oh, Karen, Karen, Karen Sverre.

Yeah, but it's Karen.

What is. Karen? Karen's played out?

Or is it just the perfect definition?

Yeah, I mean, I think

I think it's a really good definition of intemperate right like the

I would like to speak to your manager through gritted teeth is the sentence before the intemperate temper tantrum. Right?

So let's use these contacts here.

OK, so we have we have Karen Lecons speak to the manager.

But we want her intemperance

to be smooth by a cool cocktail,

so sure can we is intemperate an adjective it is.

It's an adjective.

I know it. Now in temperate customer. Right?

Hey, Steve. Can I get a fruity cocktail for an intemperate customer at Table four?

OK. I like we're on the right path.

They're making a mint julep.

She just feels like there you go. Mint Julep.

All right. What would a Karen be going off about? That needs a drink?

STAT of the moment, right?

Like, you know, I made her show me your vax card.

And there you go, Karen.

Right? Like about her.

About she had to wear a mask from the host standard table and she needs

a cocktail about it.

All right. We have picked out word of the day.

We have to fight it.

We are now use that in the context of the sentence.

Our word of the day is intemperate,
which means having a temper tantrum

or lacking in emotional calmness, coolness and control.

It means not well tempered.

In other words, not well
mixed or balanced.

The word comes from a Latin in temperatures, which I'm confident is not how that's pronounced, which is a combination of

in the verb temperature

meaning to temper or to mix, which added
no clarity to the definition, I think.

And our our sentence involves a lot of characters

because we wanted to complicate this.

And also just read.

Hey, Steve, whatever, I'm going to do that.

No, no, no, I'm doing.

I'm doing the thing.

I'm doing what I was doing.

I'm I'm right. You're.

Hey, Steve. Hey, Steve.

I had to cop a mint julep
for an intemperate Karen going off about mask freedom rights to get ahead of Karen's mildly controlled sentence.

I'd like to speak to your manager,

which of course, always predates
a temper tantrum.

So an intemperate Karen.

That's our word.

I thought that was a passable definition,

and I do think that I executed the sentence.

Absolutely wonderful. Great job, Caitlin.

If people want to see more about you and your your intemperance against the coming Android apocalypse, where can they find you? Oh God.

You can follow me on social media
at Caitlin Bailey.

It is spelled weird, quietly end.

And you can also support me
in my stubborn crusade against homophobia.

Fighting for sex worker rights at old pros, online dot org or across social media at old pros online.

That's old pros as in the oldest profession.

Excellent. Thanks

for being here and everyone.

Hey, we just expanded our vocabulary
by one word today.

Thanks for watching and.
Don't throw a temper tantrum.

Don't be an intemperate Karen. Just go.